IELTS Writing Task 2 Model Essay

Some people say that it is better to work for a large company than a small one. Do you agree or disagree?

Essay:

The debate over whether large or small companies make for a better employment experience remains ongoing. Some prefer the intimacy and diversified tasks of a smaller company, whereas others are proponents of the structure and support provided by large corporations.

Small firms proponents argue that they offer broader responsibilities, allowing employees the opportunity to enrich their career experiences and develop a well-rounded skillset. They contend that within smaller organisations, there is a more relaxed and familial environment fostering personal growth and autonomy.

In contrast, advocates of larger corporations point out the increased job stability and financial benefits. They offer benefits including paid leaves and insurance which contribute towards a healthy work-life balance. Additionally, they are more likely to present opportunities for progression and taking part in complex projects, leading to professional development.

In conclusion, while smaller companies are lauded for their diverse opportunities and close-knit work culture, I am of the assertion that the benefits and developmental opportunities in large corporations outweigh their counterparts.
